

This is the so-called Curtiss "wasp" in which Roland Rohlfs, chief test pilot for Curtiss, established a new world's altitude record. He ascended 30,700 feet in two hours and 56 minutes.

Photo, Western Newspaper Union.

Chicago is certainly having its troubles all in a bunch. In addition to the race riots the city's transportation system has been completely tied up by a strike. Pretty nearly every sort of vehicle has been called into service to carry the millions.

Photo from Underwood & Underwood.

Rohlfs talking to one of his associates just before he started upward. He set out to reach 35,000 feet and was disappointed when he fell a bit short. He found a temperature 25 degrees below zero and a 100 miles an hour gale six miles above the earth.

Photo, Western Newspaper Union.

Charlotte Demarest and Dorothy Louise Norris of Philadelphia at Narragansett Pier. The Rhode Island resort has long been a popular watering place with Quaker City folk and this season they have flocked there in more than usually large numbers.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

A recent photograph of Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, who has just returned from the Peace Conference with her husband and is again living in Washington.

Copyright, Clodinst; from Underwood & Underwood.

Harvard "old grads" have been back at Cambridge for a few days reviving old memories and getting in first hand touch with the university's needs, to relieve which a campaign for $11,000,000 has been started. One man came all the way from Honolulu and others from various distant points.

Photo by International Film.

Mrs. Frederick T. Seggermann and her husband after their marriage in Baltimore recently. She was Miss Mary Camilla Bonsal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leigh Bonsal. Mr. Seggermann was a Captain in the army.

Copyright by Bachrach.